Background

- Ofcom’s Media Tracker survey explores public attitudes and opinion on a range of media areas. Some data goes as far back as 1990.

- The survey origins are from the ITC’s ‘Public’s View’ survey. In 2005 this became Ofcom’s Residential Tracker survey.

- At the start of 2008, Ofcom’s Residential Tracker split into 2 separate surveys: i) Ofcom’s Media Tracker survey ii) Ofcom’s Technology Tracker survey

- This section covers data from the Media Tracker survey. Data is published as part of Ofcom’s Public Service Broadcasting Annual Report.
Current Methodology

- UK representative quota sample of approx. 2,100 adults (aged 16+).
- Interviews are face to face using Paper and Pencil interviewing (PAPI) technique.
- Questionnaire conducted in two dip-stick waves (to counter seasonality issues) - typically Wave 1 in April; Wave 2 in October.

Significant historical changes to methodology

- Pre 2001 - ITC’s ‘Public’s View’ survey. Typically one dip-stick wave.
- 2005 - Ofcom’s Residential Tracker. Continuous fieldwork throughout the year.
- 2008 - Residential Tracker splits into two surveys (Media Tracker and Tech Tracker) - Fieldwork moves back from continuous to two dip-stick waves (May/ Oct) - Also changes from CAPI (Computer assisted) to PAPI (Paper and Pencil)
Quality & standards within programmes

Introduction to question:
Advertising and sponsorship provides revenue for commercial TV channels. Without advertising revenue, free-to-air channels like ITV1 or Five may not exist, while pay TV channels might have fewer new programmes.

Q - Which of these statements best describes how you feel about how often ad breaks are on the ‘main commercial free to air channels’?
Q - Which of these statements best describes how you feel about how long the ad breaks last for on ITV1, Channel 4 and Five?

(Note: Question wording repeated for 'other commercial channels'. Where necessary it was explained: 'Other commercial channels’ are “all the other channels with adverts except for ITV1, Channel 4 or Five. For example, ITV2, E4, Sky One, The Discovery Channel, MTV”)

Source: Ofcom Media tracker 2010 (Base: ‘Main’ - All respondents; ‘Other’ - All with Multichannel TV)
Note: ‘Main’ channels = ITV1, C4, Five. ‘Other’ = All other channels.
Opinion on amount of programme sponsorship and trailers/promotions

Q - Which of these statements best describes how you feel about the amount of.....
(i) programme sponsorship on TV channels as a whole?
(ii) trailers or promotions for future programmes on ITV1, Channel 4 and Five?
(iii) trailers/promotions on TV channels that direct you towards another TV channel?

Source: Ofcom Media tracker 2010. Base: All aware of....programme sponsorship (1,657); trailers/promotions for future programmes on ITV1/C4/Five (1,783); trailers/promotions for website/other online services (1,100).
Opinion on how helpful trailers/promotions are

Q - Which of these statements best describes what you think about….

i) trailers/promotions on TV channels that direct you towards another TV channel? For example, this could be announcements on ITV1 telling you about a programme on ITV2.

ii) trailers or promotions on TV channels that direct you towards their website or other online services that they provide?

Source: Ofcom Media tracker 2010. Base: All aware of trailers/promos to another TV channel (1,486); All aware of trailers/promotions directing to website or other online services (1,100).
